Research also suggests that two-thirds (64%) of people are more likely to try to cut costs by attempting DIY rather than employing a tradesman.

Richard Brown, HSBC Head of Insurance Propositions, said: ‘The squeeze on household budgets means that even more people will be having a go at DIY, either as an alternative to moving home or instead of employing a professional.

‘Insurance companies receive many claims involving DIY-related accidents. Always make sure you plan well before attempting DIY and seek professional advice if necessary. Also check that your home insurance policy covers you for accidental damage.’

HSBC Home Insurance customers can opt for accidental damage cover for their property contents up to a value of £80,000.

HSBC Home Insurance offers the following tips to help reduce the risk of a DIY disaster:

- Before starting, think about whether you have the right skills and knowledge for the job;
- Check with your local council if you think you may need a permit for a large project;
- Take extra care when using machinery: most power tools have safety guards but caution is necessary;
- When working with heights ensure that the ladder or scaffold you are using is secure;
- Use protective clothing, such as overalls, gloves and eye goggles.
